Lavash & Grissini

Lavash and grissini are both types of baked bread products that originate from different regions and have distinct characteristics.

Lavash is known for its thin, soft, and flexible texture. It can be slightly chewy and has a mild, neutral flavor, making it versatile for various culinary uses.

Grissini are commonly served as appetizers or snacks. They can be enjoyed on their own or accompanied by dips, cheeses, or cured meats. The versatility of grissini makes them a popular choice for various occasions.
