Vegan

Vegan Danish pastries are a plant-based adaptation of the classic Danish pastry, known for its flaky layers and delightful fillings. In place of traditional ingredients like butter, milk, and eggs, vegan versions utilize plant-based alternatives to create a cruelty-free and dairy-free treat.

The dough for vegan Danishes may be made with ingredients such as dairy-free margarine or coconut oil, while plant-based milk substitutes like almond, soy, or oat milk are used to achieve the desired texture.

Gluten Free

Gluten-free Danish pastries are a delectable adaptation of the classic Danish pastry designed to cater to individuals with gluten sensitivities or celiac disease. These pastries are crafted using alternative flours to replace traditional wheat-based ingredients, ensuring a gluten-free and safe option for those with dietary restrictions.

Despite the absence of gluten, these pastries aim to maintain the flaky and tender layers characteristic of traditional Danish pastries.
